A RANKING OF THE DAY Y NOCHE MENU ITEMS

Important: this list does not include breakfast items, individual sides nor beverages. It is solely the Day y Noche lunch/dinner options. Also I haven't had most of these.

- 10) Burrito: If you go to Day y Noche for a simple burrito, you need to live it up a little. Get out to the Moonies more, get more adventurous with your mixers instead of opting for the plain old lemonade and vodka. Is a burrito a staple? Sure, I guess. But you only get one, and how is one burrito gonna keep you warm at night? (Spoiler: it isn't).
- 9) Tuna Tartar Tacos: I have never had this item from Day y Noche, but reading the description on the online menu stressed me out. "Rare tuna on three hard taco shells". The last thing I want on my delicious tacos is rare tuna. I don't even know anyone who puts tuna on their tacos. Is it a valid taco filling?
- 8) Salmon: I hate seafood, but this one doesn't sound that bad. The reason I give it an 8 is because I don't trust any seafood in Ohio. I guess this would technically be a riverfood, or a freshwaterfood, but still. Don't trust it. I advise eating against any salmon or fish in Granville, Ohio.
- 7) Black bean cake: this one just sounds kinda boring? I feel like if I were to order this, it would be similar to whenever I get a black bean burger from Huffman but they have no gluten free buns to accommodate my gluten free ass. It comes with vegetables, which I guess saves it, but still. Where's the drama?
- 6) Gringo tacos: This is kinda the same as the burrito. Not bad, but not exciting. This is the taco your parents make for Taco Tuesdays when you're home for break. Brings back fond memories, but you're at Day y Noche now. Time to live a little.
- 5) Flautas: The presentation of this one is really intriguing. The tortillas come served on a bed of lettuce, which is pretty fun and interesting. I think if you wanted to feel fancy for a night, you could order these and look down upon your beautiful taco presentation and think, "Fuck yeah. I'm really classy".
- 4) Fajitas: Wow, almost skipped over the fajitas. Fajitas are a good staple at any Mexican restaurant, because they can appease just about anyone. You can really DIY this one, which makes it fun to bring your crafty, stay-at-home mom here when she visits for Big Red Weekend.
- 3) Three Amigos: The variety in this entrée is unmatched. Three enchiladas, each with their own little surprise, so you can get as many of the Day y Noche tastes as possible on one plate.
- 2) Potato tacos: The only valid choice for goers of Day y Noche who also are vegetarian (me). For $9.50 you get three tacos packed with potatoes, queso fresco, peppers, and spicy guac. I love to put the side of rice and beans in the tacos and enjoy my meal that way. Very filling, but your hands will get greasy.
- 1) Tacos de carne asada: Before I became a vegetarian, the tacos de carne asada were my everything. My shawty, my ride or die. Three crispy tacos filled with beefy goodness, with refried beans and salsa included (is there a better bean than refried?). Truly a Day y Noche classic.

DID COURTNEY LOVE KILL KURT COBAIN, AND IS "RAT-A-TAT" BY FALL OUT BOY HER CONFESSION?

"No thesis existed for burning cities down at such a rampant rate / No graphics and no f*cking PowerPoint presentation / So they just DIY'd that shit and built their own bombs / She's his suicide blond, she's never in gold" - Courtney's opening verse in "Rat-A-Tat," the 10th song on Fall Out Boy's Save Rock and Roll (2013)

I now ask, how can you hear that and not think that she murdered her husband?

LOCAL JOB OPPORTUNITY

Hello!

We are Kimberly and Kelly (K2sisters). We have a new little shop in Granville behind Elm's pizza SISTER SALVAGE & SOLES. Realizing our location is not in the most seen spot in our cute little town, and that we are not good at the marketing part of our business, we are looking for someone to GET US OUT THERE. This would be a paid position. The person(s) would need to be creative patient and laugh a lot. They would be working with two 50+ year old sisters/best friends/business partners. This position/ project/ experience can start ASAP!

Thanks. Please contact us at Kimberly 513-225-0100 Kelly 740-704-9565
