ODE TO OCTOBER

To put it simply: I am obsessed with October.

It is such a great month. I think magic happens in the fall. Ya know how Lorelai Gilmore in Gilmore Girls says that everything magic happens when it snows, well that is me with October and Autumn. I am a little biased considering my birthday is in October (it is on the 6th so mark your calendars) but it is a great time of year regardless. Fall weather is kicking in so it is nice and crisp outside. The leaves are changing and looking beautiful. Some may complain about the rain that tends to come with October, but I love rain so I do not mind at all. Let's talk about rain. Nothing hits quite like a rainy fall day. Picture it: the leaves are golden and orange, it is 65 degrees outside, you have on fuzzy socks, you have your homework done, you are either reading a non-school book or you are watching TV. That is a perfect day in my book. Another great thing about October is Halloween! It is such a fun holiday. It isn't necessarily my favorite holiday but I do enjoy it because there are so many Halloween movies to watch, costumes to get, and fun to be had. Pumpkins are the best. Whether you carve them, decorate them, cook with them, or spice up your latte with them, they are a prime time seasonal vegetable. Anyways, this was essentially just word vomit about my love for October. But I just wanted to share this Autumn energy with you all because I know it is midterms and things are crazy hectic right now, but just remember that we are entering into the fall season and it is going to be so much fun! So keep your heads up, kids (well keep them down in the books but keep your spirits high)!

That being said, don't go out and pretend it is the winter holiday season right when the clock strikes midnight on October 1st. That is NOT how it works. You can not start with that Mariah Carey shiz until after Thanksgiving. Let's enjoy the Autumn season. Don't get all Santa Clause crazy and start too soon.
