THE GREAT GLEN ELLEN CAPER

These are dark days for the Bullsheet staff. Not only do we have to deal with the impending stress of interviews, but something much darker has occurred in the office this weekend. One of our dear editors, James Whitney, left his 2/3rds-empty bottle of Glen Ellen Reserve California Merlot behind the couch (for emergencies only). It was last seen Saturday around 5pm. Sunday evening, it was gone.

I've thought a lot about this incident. For some reason, I just can't shake it. How could somebody have done this? Even worse yet, another Bullsheet editor out to end me, presumably the culprit, framed me for the crime. So, I am left with no choice but to clear my name, and solve the case...

WHO STOLE JAMES WHITNEY'S WINE?

THE USUAL SUSPECTS:

Charlie Schweiger

Possible Motives:

- likes wine, the bottle was there
- frame Jack (FUN FACT: Charlie hates Jack)
- enjoys using his power to take advantage of those below him

Alibi?

- Nina?
- ???

Jack May

Possible Motives:

- also enjoys wine
- thought it was his own shitty bottle of wine
- revenge for the thousands of Venmo transactions Jack has paid James

Alibi?

- it wasn't me
- I know it wasn't me
- but what would John Locke say?

The mystery continues...

WINE & CRIME

Katie Kerrigan
Possible Motives:
 -likes wine too maybe?
 -doesn't like to leave her apartment
 -probably was not Katie
Alibi?
 -roomies <3

James Whitney
Possible Motives:
 -forgot he drank it
 -blamed Jack
Alibi?
 -none

Betsy Wagner

Possible Motives:
 -ate some really spicy cheetos in the office
 -needed refreshment desperately
 -secretly an alcoholic?
Alibi?
 -Zach Gnelson where are you when we need you most?!

LOCATING THE HOSTAGE:

Swasey Chapel

Also known as The Tower of Terror. Many have climbed, few have returned. First guess for any missing persons case.

James' Stomach

Theoretically it should a few days past potential digestion, but if we examine James' feces closely enough, we may discover traces.

Still in the office

Usually pretty plausible, although I did just clean the office on Friday so it's uncomfortably tidy right now.

Shattered!

I did, in my investigations, notice traces of glass on the walk from Knapp to East quad. If the autopsy comes back as a match, we'll that this was no wine-napping. It was wine-MURDER. In which case, we must find...

THE MURDER WEAPON:

- Nerf gun
- big stick
- gravity?
- William Kelsey
- another bottle of wine
- decomposition
- pledges
- small black hole
- small butthole (ouch)
- baseball bat
- time gun
- smegma

THINK YOU CRACKED THE CASE, YOU SLEUTH? FLIP OVER THE SHEET TO FIND OUT WHAT REALLY HAPPENED!

THE ANSWER: Jack and Betsy came into the office Saturday night to retrieve said bottle of wine at the request of Adam [LAST NAME REDACTED] and Rohan Arora (Editor-in-Chief of the Denisonian, class of '22). Instead of drinking any of it, Jack May decided to shatter the bottle against the concrete.
