GIVE US SOME GODDAMN SEATING!

Why does Denison University, our home here on the hill, hate seating? Why does it hate seeing people sitting down? There are, what, twelve chairs on A-Quad? And three tables? And two of those weird slope things that I am fairly certain I saw in the torture exhibit (RIP) at the International Spy Museum in D.C.. On the Commons there are ZERO, count them, ZILCH tables - unless you want to sit and stare into the Knowlton Center offices. I know we're not a big school, but I can guarantee that there are more than thirty students here, which is what Denison seems to think there are.

Truly, we have such a beautiful campus. I can be in the deepest depths of depression I have ever experienced, but as soon as I get a single ray of sunshine while I'm stomping about between classes, I'm cured. I love being outside, but I don't love awkwardly hovering outside. I don't love perching on the wall in the precarious space betwixt parties outside.

So let me run some numbers.

We have an endowment of $1.1 billion USD. Because we need the endowment for many things (like the FUCKING WIFI), I'll split it in half, leaving us with $550 million. Now, let's split it in half again and invest half of it into some Adirondack chairs. A nice (but not great) Adirondack chair is about $280USD. Plus a discount if the school signs up for promotional emails.

For $275 million, we could buy 982,142 Adirondack chairs. That's enough for A-Quad, the Commons, the East Quad green, the North Loop Teardrop, and the South Quad Purgatory Space. And keeping some in storage for when the Wingless Angels toss some of them off the roof of the library or something.

Now, with the other $275 million, let's invest in some picnic tables. If we buy more than three at a time, we can get them for $845USD each. What a deal! That's 325,443 picnic tables. Think of the possibilities.

I don't understand the hold up. It's not like chairs were recently invented and Denison just hasn't caught on yet. Does the person in charge of this aspect of the budget have, like, insane allergies? And they want us all to suffer with them? Like I literally cannot think of a reasonable excuse to not have outdoor seating. I'm flummoxed. Perplexed. Stumped.

Dr. Adam Weinberg, this is my ultimatum. If we don't have more outdoor seating by the end of next week, the flagpole is coming home in my carry-on this spring break.

Stone tablets slid under our office doors will also be taken but not necessarily appreciated.

We really don't like carrier pigeons, though. They get really messy.
