EAVES DROPPIN'

Denison may boast about the awards students and professors are winning, the increase in applications and interest in the school, and the leader boards we are climbing amongst other liberal arts colleges. But I believe we need a more holistic view in understanding what makes this student body so special, so unique. What are Denison students talking about? What do they care about? What is important in day-to-day life? I have taken on the painstaking role of documenting some of the invigorating, impressive, and downright intellectual conversations that happen here everyday. The following are real quotes I have overheard around campus in the last couple months. I hope you enjoy.

“I’m weirdly good at bingo”

“The movie that made me cry? Honey I Shrunk the Kids”

“It’s suicidal weather” (this was from a professor)

“Every single time I brush my back molars I gag myself”

“You look like you would have allergies”

“She’s a vile little bitch who dresses like a two year old at the beach”

“There’s no subtitles so I have no idea what they’re saying”

“I need to be a missionary”

“lowkey I think I would survive a house fire”

“I listened to her first album and it was really scary, like Charlie XCX when she was fourteen scary”

“Tunisia never left”

“No dude, I’m like, way more ferda than you”

“I gotta shit so bad I gotta put my hand down and catch it in case it falls out”

“It’s about a gay Irish bus driver”

“My dad is buying us shrooms”

“The drawing of your nipples were kinda fire”

ANTI-HAZING CASH CAB REVIEW

Today I went 0 for 2 on the anti-hazing cash cab. The rules were so simple: you hop on the golf cart, the person in the passenger seat asks you three questions related to hazing, and if you get all the answers right you get a gift card and end up at your destination.

I, like all responsible Denisonians, completed my mandatory online anti-hazing training at 3am the day it was emailed to us because I couldn't sleep. I got that thang done fast. I was on a roll. I scored perfectly on that exam at the end. So when I saw the cash cab roll onto A-quad I thought "easy money."

For those of you who have not had your $15 Chipotle gift card dreams crushed yet, it was not easy money.

On ride 1 I was being asked to give the legal definition of hazing according to Colin's law. Do I sound like someone familiar with Ohio law? Obviously I choked. Couldn't even tell you what I said but I flopped and my first ride ended in shame.

Hours pass and I am still sitting outside of Slayter when I see the cart roll up again. I wasn't even gonna give it another shot but I was beckoned to give it a go from the cart passenger, and you know what, I still wanted that gift card and I had some experience, so I swallowed my pride and went for another ride.

First question was a breeze, second question easier than the first. Then I was asked to provide the exact percentage of all Americans who have reported experiencing hazing. THE ENTIRE POPULATION?! From what survey?! What was the sample size? According to what definition of hazing? I panicked. "Uhhh 77%" I stammered. Surely that number was reasonable. The answer was 22%. I wasn't even close. At this point I was embarrassed, defeated, and forced to exit the cash cab prematurely to make room for the next participant.

Did I learn about hazing today? Yes, but at what cost? Did I have fun on the cash cab? No, I'm a sore loser. Would I give it another try? 100%. I'm gonna ride until I win. If you won today, I congratulate you. If you were like me and you did not win on the cash cab, I'm here if you need to talk, specifically about the answers you got wrong and what the correct answer was. See you tomorrow cash cab...

SECOND D-DAY PERFORMER REVEALED

Awesome news! I have top secret information from UPC about who the second D-Day artist is! The Pomegranate Bush Scalawags will also be playing D-Day this year! With hit songs such as:

Song Named After Girl
Knockoff Rex Orange County Song
Breakup Song Where you Were in the Wrong
Knockoff Brockhampton Song
Breakup Song Where you Were in the Right
Song About Going to a Party in High School

They will be playing all of these songs plus music from their most recent album: Is Air Dry?
