DENISON'S REAL ESTATE

Good evening monsters and men, allow me to take you on a journey of East Quad's impressive and sexy real estate. Just in case Denison makes some sketchy financial decisions in the near future and needs to make some easy cash by pawning off a dorm hall, here are some suggestions for the real estate listings.

Beaver - $123,000

Welcome home to a rustic yet not really that rustic home. Enjoy this basement common room's feeble attempts at a "romantic" getaway cabin the woods. The naming of this building opens a gateway to a hall called "Platypus Hall", which I, for one, am very okay with. If it could talk, it would mimic the songs of the forest.

Crawford - Less than you think but more than you have

The best designed building on campus, totally. No issues with the laundry room or common room or the kitchen or random tiny rooms in the hallway or the fact that the design is reminiscent of the Titanic. Feel like royalty as you descend the stairs to a sea of adoring fans waiting glumly in the laundry room, there is no way to not be seen in there. If it could talk, it would ask you how to leave.

East - $-40,000

For those us with more relaxing lifestyles, this substance free hall is the place to be. In fact, there is almost always a faint smell of something that, when enough is inhaled, will relax you to an alarming degree. It's details like these that make East so friendly and accessible for it's residents. If it could talk, it would cry.

Huffman - FIVE MILLION DOLLARS

All you hungry Harrys out there, listen up. You're looking for easy food access? Boom, dining hall. Boom, Bandersnatch. Miss the feel of Crawford but don't want anything to do with Crawford? Boom, Huffman. Boom, living! If it could talk, it would whisper sweet nothings in your ear.

Sawyer - $30.87

A ghost dorm. I refuse to believe people live there as I have never met anyone from there. It is a lawless land, its aesthetic and layout following the standards rules of a prison to keep the mysterious residents in line. If it could talk, it would produce small groans of pain and warning, don't get too close. It's walls are littered with watchful eyes.

MORE REAL ESTATE!

Shaw - $1.2 mil

Shaw is a playful building, it likes to play coy as it prevents you from entering it. 50% of the doors don't have handles or key card swipes on the outside! Gone are the days of doors with ease of entry, escape rooms are all the rage these days anyway. At least those very necessary stars over the doors are cute. If it could talk, it wouldn't, it would just break your knees.

Shepardson - Just whatever you got on you

Wish you could live near the ocean? Now you can live out your houseboat dreams in this elegant building that looks like a singular parentheses from a bird's eye view. Feel yourself become seasick as you wander the halls at 2 am, searching desperately for the captains quarters. Also the basement is the perfect place to both be the cause of and hide a dead body. If it could talk, it

SYLLABUS WEEK BINGO

Heard someone say "Happy FDOC"	Walked into the wrong classroom	Had to share a fun fact in class	Had homework due on the first day	Forgot the combo to your Slayer box
Slept through a class already	Added a class	Had a class cancelled already	Seen at least five different people with Stanley Cup water bottles	Attended the wrong class
Had to walk up all six stories of Talbot	Had a professor pronounce your name wrong	FREE SPACE	Heard someone say "Happy SDOC"	Ate some yummy grilled cheese in Curtis
Reconsidered your major	Attended your floor meeting	Already dropped a class	Miscalculated the walk to class and showed up late	Had your first lab go the full three hours
Said hi to Sue in Slayer	Read a copy of the Bullsheet	Stepped outside and realized you were not dressed for the weather	Didn't know your friend was in the same class	Have a class with total strangers
