OVERHEARD @ DENISON

“When did Campo get awesome?!”

“I wish that horses were more edible.”

“There’s no such thing as bisexual for men.”

“My hair sits on my head like straw and I let it do what it wants.”

“How do you even begin to compare two ugly people?”

“Man, I hate Emily Dickinson. I feel bad that she was in that house for so long, but...”

“In like three months her hair is going to fall off.”

“If we were stranded on a desert island I would eat [REDACTED] first. It wouldn’t even matter if it was only the first night.”

“Do you want all your teeth or do you want to be cool?”

“We weren’t drunk but if we got pulled over, we would have gotten a DUI.”

“He put a bunch of pre-workout into the jungle juice and that’s why everyone was so weird.”

PRETZEL SHOPPE IS LAUNDERING MONEY, LET'S TALK ABOUT IT

About a month into first semester, the student body became aware of a new addition to Granville's stache of shops. Pretzel Shoppe (particularly notable that there is no article before the name) looks like a storefront straight out of a Hollywood studio lot. If you've ever watched The Good Place, it's potentially comparable to the multitude of frozen yogurt shops in the show. Think Papa's Freezeria on Coolmathgames.com sort of design. Basically, it's fake.

And if you aren't already horrified enough, you should know that MONEY IS NOT REQUIRED TO OBTAIN PRETZELS. At first, this seems like a harmless detail, but upon further investigation or at least 3 seconds of thought, any sane person can realize that this is just weird. The owners of the shop collect the money they do receive via a large plastic bucket on the front counter. But don't fret: If you have no cash on you, a simple I owe you will suffice. No checks or balances, just the honor system. I've gotten my pretzels for free every time.

This is undeniably sketchy. The dominant rumor at the moment is that the owners are wealthy, or at least have enough money to sustain the business as simply a hobby. I'm not buying it. The whole operation feels rather hushed, as though they want to keep their methods under wraps.

What's going on in that kitchen???

Dear Denisonian, we claim this story. Do not steal it. More investigative pieces to come.

needed to reply but I know someone who tried to take photos there for class and they were VERY adamant about no photography of the store or them and then gave her free pretzels to leave
