GRAMMY'S REVIEW 2023

Last year, you might recall that I watched all of the GRAMMY® awards, and this year I did not because no award show will live up to the entertainment brought by last year's Oscars. Regardless, here are my thoughts on what I think happened during the show and based on intuition and the list of nominees and winners on the official GRAMMYS® website.

Bonnie Raitt won Song of the Year with her new track “Just Like That” making everyone under the age of 30 ask their parents “Who is Bonnie Raitt and how did she beat Taylor Swift’s ‘All Too Well (10 Minute Version) (The Short Film) (Taylors Version) (From the Vault) (The Recording Academy Apparently Hates Taylor Swift)’”

Molly Tuttle won the award for Best Bluegrass Album (something I predicted before the nominations were announced) but did not win her nomination for best new artist (shockingly...).

I realized I am old when Molly Tuttle’s name was the only one I recognized of the nominees for Best New Artist.

Nobody Understands how the “Best _____ Performance” categories are decided. Seriously, what performance are they basing this award on? Are they basing it off the recorded version? THIS AWARD DOES NOT MAKE SENSE!

Beyoncé has to buy a new shelf to support the weight of her GOATED success (don’t worry, she can afford it).

Snarky Puppy won best contemporary instrumental album! If you know Snarky Puppy you’re cool af.

Brandi Carlile is somehow always nominated but still doesn’t win in the big categories. She still won 2 awards this year tho, so she’s doing fine.

Madison Cunningham honestly shocked me by winning best folk album just because I thought the Recording Academy bias would not favor her, but I was wrong. Cheers Madison!

Everyone who didn’t watch are the real winners. Seriously, all the winners were predictable as hell. Nobody got assaulted by Will Smith. Trevor Noah hosted for the second consecutive year? Nothing against him, but you gotta make these shows feel new and refreshing.

Anyways, that wraps up my review. I hope TAR wins best picture at the Oscars this year. And I hope I get nominated for a GRAMMY® next year.

Top 5 Sexiest Bathrooms: Best Bathrooms on Campus for a Quickie

In a totally normal conversation with my two roommates, we began to wonder where the best bathrooms on campus to have a quickie were. (Not together, of course...Rita, Anna, if you're reading this, please reconsider.) After consulting a few of our friends, these are the top 5 we came up with, in order from least sexy to most sexy. Disclaimer: I am not responsible for any resulting sexy time that occurs in these locations—or any other location, for that matter.

5. Burton Morgan, men's/women's, 5th floor

Ever felt fucked over by the admissions office? Now you can fuck by the admissions office! It's the administrative building, so you know they actually keep that one clean. But again, it's right by admissions, so you probably want to stay quiet to stay a student—unless you think you can impress them.

4. Bryant, gender neutral, 2nd floor

Lots of space and a shower, but make sure you're quiet enough that the juniors in their studios can't hear you. Also, you might need to let them in occasionally to wash their paintbrushes (even though they're not supposed to do that).

3. Barney Davis, women's, 3rd floor

Do you want the sexiness of shower sex AND public sex? Well I have just the bathroom for you! Also one of the two women's bathrooms in the building, so you've got a 50/50 shot whether any woman seeking to relieve themselves is going to interrupt.

2. Eisner, gender neutral, 2nd floor

Lots of room and, occasionally, background music. Make sure you schedule your session for Thursdays at 5 to hear wherever the band is playing this semester, or Fridays at 1pm to get some smooth jazz to set the mood.

1. Hoaglin, gender neutral

Newest bathroom on campus, so much space, and comes with a bench for some extra spice. Make sure you lock the door though, cause those motion sensors to open the doors are sensitive. Wouldn't want someone to catch a peek while you're changing positions.
