EXIT 407: THE GATEWAY TO ADVENTURE

Claire and Mick,
Evil Friends

As Mick, Lauren, and I trekked from North Carolina back to good ole Denison University this past Sunday, we saw some incredible sights. Driving through Tennessee we stumbled upon a beautiful exit: Exit 407. This place could be considered the 8th wonder of the world. It was an oasis of billboards, and those billboards did not disappoint. Here are our favorite signs that we saw:

BOOT SUPPLY STORE: BUY 1 GET 2 FREE

Out of all of the attractions that are located on Exit 407, we most seriously considered stopping here. This place either has the coolest boots you have ever seen, or is a total shit show. I wish we could know. I wonder how it smells in there?

COOTERS MUSEUM

I’m so intrigued... What do they have in a cooters museum? I also wonder how it smells in there?

FIREWORKS STORE

I mean come on that’s sick. I would set a bunch of fireworks off in the middle of nowhere too.

FLAVORTOWN

Have you ever heard of Guy Fieri? One of his own Flavortown restaurants are located in the gateway of adventure! Anyone can fuel up at Flavortown after a long day at the Cooters Muesem!

SEXY STUF

This is obviously a top of the line sex store or else it wouldn’t be located on Exit 407. But, I want to know why they decided to take off the second “F” in “stuff.” Anyways, this place looks like it can help take the load off of a long drive.

WORLD’S LARGEST KNIFE

Fuck yeah.

PRISON TOURS!

Taking for-profit prisons to the next level.

HARLEY DAVIDSON STORE

Fuck yeah.

WINERY THAT WAS JUST CALLED “WINERY”

I wonder if they have a specialty wine called “wine.”

NEW ENTRIES I'VE FOUND IN MY NOTES APP SINCE SPRING BREAK ENDED

Lauren "the Tank" Ehlers,
Most Ferda

1. Starting off with a bang, we have a note that I must've written absolutely shit-faced on the first night my friends and I spent at our surprisingly-not-too-trashed-in-the-aftermath Airbnb:

maker narreman an rt wren etrais. roman eworhhh thing we're weees burti i really w really arently and i smdrewlyq man's he nudalr e. marlena xe ava we've did me share of ew people ncpwople

Wow. I think I said it all.

2. Next, we have an actually coherent drunk thought, but it's still just as stupid. So far I am very underwhelmed by the inner workings of my drunken mind, and I predict you will be too:

being in a room of drunk people is like setting the stage for a final destination movie

Like I'm right and there were definitely several instances where someone could've been decapitated or set aflame during my spring break, but god this is the most boring thing I've ever read and, upon reading it, I've become a much sadder person than I was before.

3. Third:

*friend's name* birthday message

It was the birthday of *friend's name* on Saturday and, for a second, part of the plan seemed to be that everyone would write them a little note. This is as far as I got.

4. Here is a fun fact that my friend (awarded "Most Facts" superlative the night before) espoused as we left the maybe-a-little-bit-trashed-in-the-aftermath-but-still-not-that-bad-all-things-considered Airbnb:

dinosaurs saw the same view of the appalachian mountains we did because the formations predate teeth

Genuinely this is just cool! Thank you unnamed friend.

5. Finally, I have this quote from my fellow Bullsheet writer, Claire "Pretentious Claire" Anderson, during our drive back to Denison. It is the best thing in my Notes App to date:

"i swallow all my gum but sometimes it feels like a chore." - claire

A moment of silence please.

Ok. Isn't that just the wildest thing you've ever read. After dropping this bombshell on the carpool—and subsequently DEFENDING HER POSITION for several minutes—she went on to swallow a small- to medium-sized wad of Big League Chew.

That's all. I could continue, but the rest are mostly sobering notes about the desolate landscape of rural Kentucky and also, "I noticed a wrinkle the other day."

BIG IDIOT

Mick, Claire, and Lauren,
Bunkmates

Oh yeah, we also picked up a dog off the side of the highway in rural Kentucky. We named her Big Idiot. She was a 1-2 years old Great Pyrenees. No tag, no chip.
