“GRANVILLE’S BIGGEST RANSOM NOTE”

Vol. XLIV, No. 41

THINGS MY FRIENDS HAVE IN THEIR POCKETS

Caroline Lopez,
Very observant

Sometimes my friends pull shit out of their pockets. Here’s what I’ve observed them pulling out:

Torn off the bottle Modelo labels, a love note, three small blue pills, a Common Grounds punch card, a Ziploc bag with nothing in it, a Bullsheet, car keys, an Elf Bar, two plastic forks, a brownie smushed and massaged into a napkin, tobacco crumbings, a Snoop Dog Bic lighter, one baby carrot, and a Red Frame Lab sticker. But that’s not all. Last week, Bullsheet Managing Editor Claire Anderson gathered the troops together, reached into that endless pocket of hers like this:

And pulled out a ransom note. Now, the ‘Sheet doesn’t mess around. We take all feedback and accusations very seriously, so it’s no joke when we say that the sheer sight of this piece of paper literally made staff writer Griffin Conley break into a torrential downpour of sweat and subsequently pass out on the broccoli cheddar soup-soaked floor of Curtis Dining Hall. The ransom note in question has been pasted below. If you have the greywater, please return it.

bULLSHEET, we've taken the GREY WATER. YOU placed an ad for it several weeks ago, but did not actually sell it on your website, so we had to take matters into our own hands. ALL FOUR of us have been throwing up for several days,  has developed puss-y Boils on her arms and legs, and  can't stop crying. ONE MILLION DOLLARS! IN EXCHANGE for the BILLS ON BILLS we've paid for the MEDICAL MYSTERIES we've BECOME. WHAT the hell is in that STUFF!?

MISSING MISSING MISSING MISSING MISSING

FOUND MY SOCK AGAIN (PHEW)

Caroline Lopez,
Junior Editor

Clearly the Bullsheet has amassed a considerable following, because we've got loyal supporters who return our socks to us after they see they've been proclaimed lost in the Bullsheet! Last week, after publishing an article regarding my lost (again) sock, I returned home to find a single (1) sock lying limp outside my door. I was shocked. Our faithful readership had the decency to return my single sock, which I assume got lost in the maze of a Sawyer laundry room. Who knew Denison had room service!?! I hope that this gut-wrenchingly painful fight has finally ended. Here's a photo for proof, and sleep easy tonight knowing that the pair has been reunited one. last. time.
