“GRANVILLE’S SAFE SPACE”

Vol. XLIV, No. 57

— HELP WANTED —

The Bullsheet is currently interested in hiring a Newspaper (Bullsheat) Hawker and we want YOU.

Job Description:

We are looking for passionate and enthusiastic workers who don't mind being disrespected by the public (or their employer) looking to make an impact on campus! All we expect is that you stand outside Knapp, announcing the latest Bullsheet headline to the passersby.

Roles and Responsibilities:

- Look damn cute in a newsies cap
- Use your best outside voice
- Stand outside Knapp from 8 am-8pm daily
- Keep the Denisonian Paper Delivery Boy off your turf
- Have rudimentary-to-expert tap dancing skills (be prepared to use them)
- Smoke a pack and a half a day (with proof)

THIS IS NOT A DELIVERY POSITION,
WE ALREADY HAVE THOSE.

Pay Starts at: 30 cents per 100 sheets

SOME POETRY

Carter Seipel, tortured soul

Leaves? Dead. Air? Crisp. Coffee? Black (with pumpkin spice). Fall is here and my mood fell off. In my melancholy I realized I've been wasting my life on this comedy thing. I think I'm a poet now? A sad poet specifically. Though I now dress in all black and say "woe is me!" I am not without a heart. So when Head Writer Mick Smith texted the Bullsheet group chat in need of some content I decided to share four of my most heart-wrenching poems.

Editor's note: Head Writer Mick Smith did not publish this article for fear of the truth Carter speaks, so now I (not Mick) am left to pick up the slack.

I take a drag of my cigarette
And I cough,
And I cough,
And I cough,
And I cough,
And I cough,
And I cough,
And I cough,
For I do not smoke

I can't pay for rent
tickets, so I sit silent.
No dancing or a' singing
Only church bells a' ringing

Mr. Grey lives in the gray house,
Mr. Brown lives in the brown house,
Mr. Pink lives in the pink house,
Who lives in the white house?

Give thanks
Take snakes
And rob banks
(with said snakes)
