GRANVILLE'S SALTIEST PUBLICATION

Vol. XLV, No. 11

GUESS WHOS 21!?!?!?!?! (Part 0/21)

Slayter box #21

It's me! I'm 21! And I'm going to make sure everyone knows it. And yes, I do celebrate the entire month. And to celebrate, I thought it'd be super duper fun to do a 21 part series in the Bullsheet! Each part will take an extensive look back at a single year of my life. It will be equal parts informative, touching, cerebral and probably even funny.

Unfortunately, The Bullsheet is not mine to edit every night. The Bullsheet staff is full of editors and writers with their own ideas on what the sheet should look like. Talk about selfish! Sometimes, editors will even want to have a whole sheet just for their one idea. I always found that to be a little too ambitious. I mean, who do they think they are? The Denisonian?

That's why I decided I should take charge of the sheet for a spell. Taking the bull by the horns, if you will! All other students need not submit for the next 21 days. The editors have 21 great articles guaranteed and all of those staff writers can simply take a break from writing. No need to thank me guys.

Now, I know we're all as excited as I am for this new project, but let's go over the ground rules. To avoid any confusion, I made up a list of my demands guidelines for the editors to follow when including my magnum opus in this otherwise alright publication.

The demands guidelines are as follows:

- The 21 parts must be in CONSECUTIVE order (And yes, I do expect you to start printing on the weekend to avoid any weird gaps in the narrative).
- Do not print two installments in one day. This needs to be drawn out.
- Each part has been written in latin (my preferred language), please translate them into english.
- If time permits, provide a Spanish translation for your readers as well.
- If you do one in Spanish, you might as make one in braille too (call it the braille-sheet).
- Do not include any bad articles on the same sheet as mine.
- Edit drunk (I am 21 after all).
- While editing, editors may only listen to 21 Pilots OR 21 Savage (DO NOT mix the two).
- The sheet's font keeps switching between minion pro and times new roman. Let's keep it consistent for my articles. I'd prefer mine to be typed up in Luminari.
- This stuff should be front page news, but in the unlikely event of a tragedy, you may put it on the back.
- IF my article is going to be on the back, don't make that weird cow thing say anything unfunny.
- Make sure it gets on your website (some of you aren't uploading to www.denisonbullsheet.com regularly).
- PLEASE only print on white paper, so nothing looks out of place when I show off "The Complete Collection™"
- And don't forget to have fun! This is your sheet as much as it's mine, except for the fact that half of it will be mine.

Thanks for publishing in advance <3

ALL IS LOST: CLIC RELEASEES OFFICIAL HOMESTEAD AGENDA

Slayter Boxes
7041 and 8487,
Submission

In an administration-favorable turn of events it appears that the Homestead/CLIC battle is nearing its end. CLIC has threatened to re-house all current Homesteaders into “the Sunnies,” the party space in Sunset House, where they will sleep Willy Wonka grandparents style. Although the students found the premise of shared-bed sleeping tempting, being so far away from the fresh grasses, plants, and weeds of the Homestead would be too much to bear.

Entering negotiations, CLIC released their official agenda to the Denisonian, but since we snuck into their office last night, we can reveal it to you right here in the Bullsheet.

Alford Community Leadership and Involvement Center’s Official Homestead Agenda:

Item I: The “Go Outside” Initiative

The office of First Year Experience will now begin the “Go Outside” Initiative for class of ‘28 with mandatory shuttling to the Homestead.

This new initiative serves to ensure those who experienced the Covid-19 pandemic in their formative middle-schooling years learn about what grass and trees are. This will also provide employment opportunities for student shuttle drivers who will be paid a $16 stipend at the beginning of the year instead of hourly wages. This will also connect current Homesteaders with campus life to ensure they do not miss out on any formative college experiences.

Item II: CLIC’s Disorientation

Historically sponsored by the Denison Outdoor Orientation leaders, this classic “Pre-O” event will now be a sober event held at the Moonies. It will be catered by Holy Crepe food truck and the crepes will be two meal swipes each.

Item III: Connections & Community at the Commune

For future community dinners, Denison administration will be deployed to the Homestead to oversee goings-on and foster a CLIC-approved atmosphere. This will serve to foster valuable connections between students and staff, which is arguably more valuable than student-professor connections.

These elements will formally take effect once DCGA signs off. They are currently reviewing their cursive in order to make sure their signatures are good enough to sign into policy. In attempts to get the Homestead’s perspective, we interviewed a Homesteader but the majority of the interview consisted of unintelligible sobbing and puffs from their cart.

DECODED FROM A TELEGRAM FOUND IN THE BULLSHEET OFFICE:

Listen, I can’t comply with the posting policy, but I just want to let you on the front lines know that we support you. As a recently-CLIC-purchased historic student endeavor, we at The Bandersnatch are on your side.

Don’t let them win—they suck out your soul, they talk about “student life” yet all I’ve been seeing is student death. I mean, family friendly Cards Against Humanity? What are we, twelve?! We might as well just call you by your name.

Please be careful, for our sake. If this ever gets leaked we’ll be defunded completely, painted over, and turned into an auxiliary meditation room for Hoaglin. I’ll leave a Snagel outside our doors tonight, for Blanket.
