COMPENSATION DOESN'T INCLUDE

CSEA
LAW

Compensation isn't for everyone. We're not communists! We're lawyers! This is the fine print.,
Despite our (many) mistakes, you will not be compensated if...

You were already on the mailing list (and good for you, you eager beaver reader!)

You gave up after the first failed scan, we don't raise quitters

You were wrong about what was in the Bullsheet's urn

You didn't follow the Bullsheet Wattpad

You're a Burpee or in the Denisonian

You spill coffee on your lap

You're a a slow walker

Your name is Gary

For those who missed last weekend's D-Day event, you may rest easy knowing that the perimeter was securely guarded by a chain link fence. This, no doubt, was to keep out Mr. Zucker's many enemies. Curiously, this fence was plastered with several ads all reading "RENT-A-FENCE!"

I am left with only one question. Why? Is the fence renting market really that lucrative? Frustrated, I spent the last few days trying to whip up some reasons you might buy a fence:

- 1. You saw an ad for Denison's Fencing Club - Whether you're trying to join them or protect yourself from all those scary members with skinny swords, a chain link fence will surely help you!
- 2. You want to star in We Bought A Fence - Who wouldn't want to star in this low budget knock off of We Bought a Zoo? If you're lucky you might still get to kiss Oscar nominee Scarlet Johanson!
- 3. "Some people build fences to keep people out and other people build fences to keep people in" - Stephen McKinley Henderson said that in the Oscar winning film Fences (2016).
- 4. You want to be the only kid in class - Surround the building, and keep your classmates out of class. Why? So you can be your favorite professor's star student of course!
- 5. Your friend crossed the line - They said no offense, and you misheard lol

I hope these ideas will get this fence based economy flowing, and if you were thinking about renting a fence, hopefully you are no longer on the fence about it!

DISCLAIMER: This sheet was NOT sponsored by RENT-A-FENCE. Please use fences responsibly.
