Movie night 6/22/2024

I am sorry for picking Zola(2020) for a summer movie night. It was wrong of me to fall victim to the dazzling and shiny phrase “based on a Twitter thread”. Just because it sat on my Letterboxd watchlist for over a year was not reason alone to watch without reading the description, watching a trailer, or even considering skimming the parent’s guide. But it would be wrong to apologize without thinking about the future. Going forward I will make sure to consciously make selections for movie nights, as well as think more about the audience. Please know this transgression not only cuts you three, but also me. We were all caught off guard by that movie. You three are gentlemen and I plan to work on my behavior for future movie nights. Looking towards the future, I

Trip to Landmark Kendall Square Cinema 7/15/2024

Based on my failures with Zola(2020), it is clear that I did not learn from my above mentioned mistake. When I suggested Kinds of Kindness(2024) I intentionally did not watch any trailers, read anything about the plot, or clue you guys into what we saw. I can now recognize that one short gif of Emma Stone dancing to Cobrah is not sufficient for picking a movie with a group. I should be honest, when I gained an interest in seeing it, I did read over the parent’s guide. Overall, I knew it was not a movie I wanted to watch with my parents, and I didnt try to remember the details so I wouldn’t get a sense of the plot. On another note, I am sorry for choosing a theater that didn’t have slushies or reclining chairs that went all the way back. A very upright three hours for two upstanding men who deserved better from me.
