SOME THOUGHTS I'VE BEEN THINKING Lucy Dale, Genius

1.) The first time someone saw a waterfall they probably turned to the person next to them and said "hey look at that water fall" and that second person was probably high or something and just thought that was the actual name and since then we've been calling it "a waterfall" and not "water falling."

2.) Some professors have to teach the same lesson like three times in a day. That's kind of obvious but it really stumps me when I'm in a class and think about how ten minutes ago a different group of students were sitting here and being taught the exact same information by the same professor. Honestly, I can't even eat the same thing for lunch and dinner so I would simply explode if I were a professor.

3.) People who say that something is "ruined" for them after experiencing a really good version of that thing are very annoying. "I can't eat chain restaurant pizza cause I'm from New York City!" Respectfully, close your mouth and throw away the key. We all know that Joe's pizza on the corner of 5th Ave is way better than Donatos but you're in Ohio now sweetie so suck it up and crunch down on some thin crust.

HELP WANTED

Griffin Conley,
Fluttered

Hello I (22M) am looking for an immediate appointment with an augur. After a recent encounter of the avian kind I am feeling flightless, short sighted, and cold. Sorry wait, that's a penguin. In all seriousness, I am reeling after encountering not one but two dead birds on my door way. Okay, well not my doorway or even my apartment entrance, but the entrance to Silverstein. While it is clear these birds were not dropped off by a cat or maliciously placed there(my hypothesis is they hit glass and died on impact), I do still feel that there is an imminent sign approaching. For context: this happened on Monday. After class. I am walking from A Quad to senior apartments. Late afternoon. Not quite dusk. Still some sun. But a decent chill. I am single. I hadn't had dinner yet. I was on the phone with my dad.

The reasoning for augury: Yes it could just be a coincidence. But if the Romans believed that birds held some significance to the mysteries of life, shouldn't I at least explore the possibility that I received a sign? Based on a cursory Google search, the results of augury could depend on their flights, singing, or feedings. This is where you come in. What if there is no flight, singing, or feeding? Because they are dead. Willing to negotiate fair compensation and maybe reimburse gas. Open to you keeping the birds. Thank you for your time.

HOW THE MONTERREY SIX WOULD VOTE

Griffin Conley,
PPA Major

Celeste Wright: Kamala Harris 100%. In her usual silent manner she becomes a staunch Harris supporter. She likes the idea of seeing a strong prosecutor in the White House. Not enough to put a sign in front of her Carmel house, but just enough to talk loudly about Harris's record at pick up and drop off.

Madeline Martha McKenzie: Won't vote. MMM resents the hell out of Kamala Harris. Hates seeing her so self confident and driven with a robust professional background. But at the same time, MMM can't fathom voting for Donald Trump. He just reminds her of the catty and nasty parents of Otter Bay. Instead, she'll mobilize people around her to vote and go in person with Abigail. Most likely, she will put herself as a write-in candidate and call it "more feminism than usual for a Tuesday".

Genuinely undecided. As much as she hates vaccines and the idea of an expanded "hellish corporate pharmacracy state", she will not vote for the guy who is accelerating climate change. Detests Jill Stein, not for trying to waste people's votes, but for having a medical degree. And RFK killed a bear and butchered a whale. Bonnie just can't catch a break.

Jane Chapman: Donald Trump. Likes his pro gun stance and doesn't want to vaccinate Ziggy.

Mary Louise Wright: Donald Trump. And she will let you know. Publicly disapproves of Harris for too many reasons. Everytime someone tries to engage with her politically she'd rehash the game three gripes. Having a long career dedicated to the public sector? Puhleaseeee. Mary Lousie would call it tacky and desperate. Being a prosecutor is just bullying everyday people. Being a step mother and an involved aunt? Selfish! "That fake Momala hullabaloo steals from us real moms. The ones that actually gave birth and tried raising them. She just wants a participation trophy for paying college tuition". And you know Mary Louise finds all the laughter attention seeking and performative. Gosh it makes her just want to scream!

Renata Klein: Donald Trump. Look, yes Renata has probably hosted several fundraisers for Kamala Harris. But those were when Harris was aiming for Attorney General and Senate. Then Renata saw Harris as equal. Another gal from Nor Cal trying to make it in a man's world. Now that Harris is going for a "real job", Renata can't abandon the pro-business candidate. Obviously she'll publicly claim to vote for Harris(it's the only way to get back on a magazine cover these days). Mainly she fantasizes about some tax loophole that will come with Trump. Also, it leaves her room to run to be the first woman president.
