GUIDE TO CRUDE 2000S CANADIAN COMEDIES

Tatum Thomas,
Comedic
(but not crude)

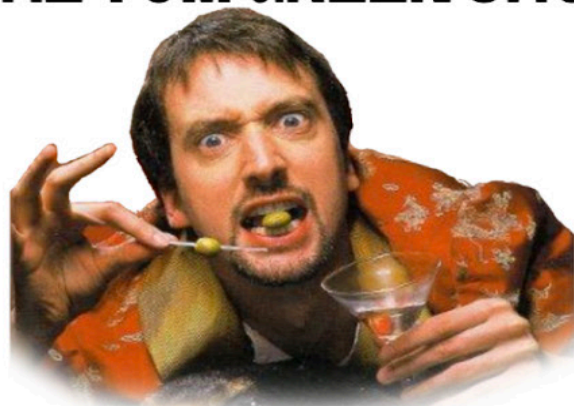

Despite being known for having some of the most polite people in the world, Canadian sitcoms are full of some of the most insanely crude humor that has ever been put on television. Most people call it middle-school humor others think this is content made specifically for stoners but those who have real taste in comedy know that these shows are the creme of the crop. My name is Tatum and I have used my 100% weed-free mind to put together this small but powerful Guide To Crude 2000s Canadian Comedies:

KENNY VS SPENNY

Go to YouTube and watch an episode of this show IMMEDIATELY. This show is about 2 best friends who compete with each other and things quickly devolve into chaos every episode. No this is off limits! Kenny has done things like slip Spenny LSD, blast Spenny with Radiation, and a bunch of other stuff i can't list here. I Recommend starting with the episode "Who Can Keep a Dead Octopus on their Head The Longest?". It's like Impractical Jokers if all the friends hated each other and had 50% less censorship. Give it a Watch!

THE TOM GREEN SHOW

Do you like Eric Andre? Guess who he took his style from! This show is a cross between a parody of Late-Night TV and early 2010s YouTube pranksters. The highlight of this show for me is all the pranks he plays on his parents, such as the time he gets a picture of two people making love airbrushed on his parent's car, and out of embarrassment, his dad starts walking to the bus stop only for Tom to pull up to the crowded bus stop in the car he just ruined moments later. I highly recommend watching clips of the parent pranks.

SOUTH PARK

For The Cartoon Lovers out there this one is for you! This is the show a lot of us weren't allowed to watch as kids but watched anyway. If you never seen an episode of South Park, do yourself a favor and watch the episode where they make fun of Scientology.

TRAILER PARK BOYS

This show walked so shows like The Office, It's Always Sunny In Philadelphia, and Parks & Recreation could RUN. In a nutshell, this show is about 3 guys who constantly go in and out of jail trying to find ways of making it out of the trailer park. If you got an edgy sense of humor and a Netflix account this show and its 4 spin-offs are waiting for you!

MUCH ADO ABOUT BUZZARDS

Eleanor Mason,
Buzzard Apologist

Have you noticed the buzzard population soaring over the last semester? Do you find it positively fowl? Do you wish they'd just give it a nest? Well worry not! I do believe I've got a solution to rid this campus of its terrible bird-en.

Jokes aside, we really do have a problem here folks. Last semester, I remember looking to the sky and thinking "Ah, nice to see a couple of buzzards out and about." These days, I find myself wondering if someone has cast a plague down upon us. Where once there would have been three or four birds lining the top of a building, I now see them perched by the droves, staring down at the students like we're their next meal. I tell ya, I've never felt more like dead meat.

Here's the thing though. Even if we take all the buzzards on campus, there can only be, what, a few hundred of 'em? Last I checked, there were at least 2,000 students on this fine campus of ours. And we're losing to a few little birdies? Come on you guys.

So here's what I propose. Each room, until we run out of bird supply, shall adopt 1 (one) buzzard apiece. The residents of that room shall be responsible for housing, feeding, raising, and, for particularly ambitious buzzards, financially supporting their bird until such time as it a) dies or b) flies the coop for new horizons. Gone will be the days of ineffective firework-based bird control and constant avian surveillance. Under this system, our campus can once again return to its former glory.

So what are you waiting for! Join Operation Board-a-Bird today! Feel free to write any and all questions on large slabs of raw beef and leave directly in front of the library, please and thank you.

(P.S. Did you like my bird puns? I do hope they didn't fly over your head.)

PAYIN' THE BILLS

What? You're gonna pretend like you've never needed to make a few extra bucks? Get off that high horse of yours. DCGA only gave us $30 for our hat budget and we need something else to fund our annual BBADsheet (bowler, beanie, ascot, and deerstalker) retreat. Plus, most of the staff recently invested in something called "Swag4Birds" in an effort to support Eleanor's initiative to take in the campus buzzards. Not surprisingly, it was a total disaster. The birds wouldn't sit still long enough to be forced into the boots and the Denison-branded hoodies just looked silly. I don't know what we were thinking. We immediately cut ties with "Swag4Birds", blocking them on all platforms (except Instagram cuz we still don't have access to our account, S4B is gonna run rampant in our comment section), and turned to our inbox (bullsheet@denison.edu) for some more sponsorship opportunities. So, without further ado, a word or two from our sponsors:
