Or, when you happen upon a set of miniature horseshoes without a home, at which point you would be able to bless your tiny horse with a new pair of shoes.

IDEAS FOR THE BULLSHEET

Hayley Shay,
Freshman Writer

Being new to writing for the Bullsheet, I was having trouble coming up with something to write about. So, I turned to my friends for ideas. The following are all responses to the question "What should I write about in the Bullsheet?" Here's the standouts:

"How we're getting a bit too laissez faire with furrries."
- Benjamin

"How to get laid this weekend."
- Thomas (virgin)

"How white men are afraid of furrries."
- Thomas (critical, virgin)

"Write about me. Just, like, be mean. I'm serious."
- Naomi "Stupid Asshole" Bernstein

"Maybe niche tik tok trends. Like Nicholas Chavez edits."
- Sam*, proceeded to show me two minutes of TikTok edits of a normal looking guy doing nothing

"The what? I don't want you doing that."
- Mom

"So you know the tale of Genji, from the Heian period of Japan, literally the 1100s, in Japan...there was an author, she wrote, and like—he had tons of mommy issues and he kept breaking women's hearts because he was in love with his step-mom. And, he got with women if they looked like his step mom. But this one girl was the step-moms niece. He meets the step-mom's niece, the illegitimate niece. However—and he kidnaps her and he, like, raises her until she's fourteen, and then they get married. 'Cause she looks like his stepmom. And tell me why all the girls [in class] who read it thought this was the most romantic thing ever, and they wanted to get kidnapped by a prince? And I was like, oh my god, that reminds me of nowadays One Direction fan-fics...like we can connect it! Like, getting kidnapped by One Direction, getting sold to One Direction...like, I can't believe that's been a phenomenon since the beginning of time of women being like 'That is so romantic, getting kidnapped by this man when I was eleven years old.' [beat of silence] That is my piece."
