A very real life conversation I witnessed on the way to the library with four American people and one British person:

Brit: What's the difference between a buck and a dollar?
American 1: There's no difference.
American 2: There's a huge difference.
American 1: There is? No there's not.
American 3: Yeah there is. Like the spelling, the number of letters, you know.
American 1: No of course there's not they're the same thing. You didn't know that?
Brit: Well I mean there's a difference between a quid and a pound.
American 2: There is?
American 3: Wait what's the difference between a quid and a pound?
Brit: No, there's no difference between a quid and a pound. I was joking.
American 2: Oh wait so they're the same?
American 3: Oh hey, kinda like a buck and a dollar!
American 4: Those are the same?
American 1: Wait so what's the difference between a pound and a dollar?
Brit: There's a ratio of (insert ratio because I didn't quite catch that part and I'm not great at conversions).
American 3: So then what about quid to dollars?
American 2: Oh my God dude they're the same thing.
American 3: Quid and dollars?
Brit: No, quid and pounds!
American 3: Oh. So how many dollars is that?
Brit: Oh my God I'm done. Ask google.

O.M.G. Guess what. You'll never believe it.

Yesterday I heard Sadie tell Sally what Scott told her that he heard about Sam and Sarah, but how did Scott hear about Sam if Sadie and Sally were together, unless they weren't, but then where was Sally, because Sally told Scott she was with Sadie, but she wasn't, so then what's Sally hiding from Scott? But I guess that's not the real issue, it's the secret about Sam and Sarah that worries me, but I don't know what it is because Sadie won't tell me because of what happened with Scott last week, but that wasn't even my fault, so why is Sadie taking Scott's side, unless...yes, Sadie must have something with Scott that Sally doesn't know about, but no, because Sally is the one that told Scott she was with Sadie, unless...yes, Sally must have been with Scott and Sadie lied because she was with Stuart, I forgot about him, and they were super cozy at Sam's on Saturday night, when Scott wasn't there, so since Scott was missing, Stuart showed up for Sadie, but wait, because Sally wasn't at Sam's either, so if Sally and Scott were missing from Sam's, then where were they, unless...yes, Sally and Scott were together! Oh my. Well, do with that information what you will, but you didn't hear it from me...
