GRANVILLE'S BIRTHDAYYYYYY PUBLICATION

Vol. XLV, No. 114

McWHAAAAT

Standrew Committee,
Submission

ATTENTION EVERYONE!!!!!!!

Today is the one and only Andrew McNutt's birthday! For those of you who don't know Andrew, what the heck are you doing wrong?! March on over to the First Year Office this very second and learn the ancient wisdom of his good vibes. In case you're in a rush (wish you shouldn't be...make time, dang it!), here is a brief but COMPLETELY ACCURATE field guide to the essential McNutt life story.

1. Andrew is the first ever Zilennial. That's right, it says so on his birth certificate under the official declaration that he was born wearing those Warby Parker glasses (a biological miracle!)
2. Andrew is a prominent activist. You heard me! For over a decade, Andrew has been one of the fiercest allies to the celiac community. Sure, he can make the better and far tastier decision to eat gluten but he'll opt for the inferior chickpea pasta! Last week, Martha Stewart hailed Andrew as "the Greta Thunberg of gluten awareness." Snoop Dogg said "ditto."
3. Andrew has A LOT of thoughts on Challengers. Boy howdy does he have conspiracies on conspiracies about the recent Zendaya love triangle tennis drama. If you want to see a scathing Letterbox review, look no further folks!
4. SNL's Domingo was based on McNutt. Not to get too much into history, but in the year 2019, in the John Carroll University library, a junior Andrew and freshman Marcello Hernandez shared a brief conversation in which Andrew said, and I quote, "Came all this way, had to explain, direct from McNutt." After that, well, you can see how a life-changing sketch was born.
5. McNutt selflessly volunteered for the pilot Big Red healthcare program. We all know that 26 means bye-bye to your parent's plan, so Andrew selected the newest medical option on campus. Every year from now until 2075, he will sacrifice one vital organ to the buzzards. In return, Andrew gets a lifetime supply of coffee-rubbed steak and Mucinex. Is that a deal or what?!
6. ANDREW MCNUTT IS THE COOLEST AND NICEST BOSS ON CAMPUS AND EVERYONE SHOULD GO BE A FIRST-YEAR FELLOW NOW TO EXPERIENCE HIS DAD ROCK MEETS 2013 TUMBLR PLAYLISTS.

Commit these facts to memory and go wish Andrew a happy McBirthday!

TORNADO SURVIVAL GUIDE

- Keep an eye on that wind - Here's a tip: try dropping some dirt in front of you to see how windy it is. Classic for a reason!
- Pack a go-bag - You gotta be ready to BOLT when that first gust of wind hits. Do not stay inside and hide.
- Open all your curtains and stay near the windows - How else will you see the tornado coming? Duh.
- Find and purchase a cow - Everyone knows a cow flying in circles is a tell-tale sign there's a tornado. I would recommend getting a few cows in case you need to know if aliens are in the area.
- If you are an old woman living her husband and niece in rural Kansas, accept that this might be it for you - The scripture doesn't lie. Your niece is about to have the adventure of a lifetime and she'll be way too cool for you when she gets home.
- Stay in old buildings - The older they are, the more reliable. Each house built prior to 1976 has withstood countless storms. I'll take the seasoned pros over the new players, thanks.
- Break out the hot-air balloon - Similar to the old woman one, legend tells that the best time to fly is during a tornado. Bonus points if you're a down-on-your-luck crackpot magician.
- Consider pursuing amateur storm-chasing - No time like the present! Don't bother yourself with things like "theory" and "safety," just get out there!
- Head for the eye - Everyone knows the center of things is where the party is. And they're waiting for youuu.
- Look out for sea life! - Sounds silly, but braver men than you have had rough luck with the collab between the sea and the heavens.
- Don't try to out-run it - No one likes a show-off.
- Split Up - Scatter! Try to confuse it! You'll cover more ground that way. And inscrease the percentage of your party's survival.

MOVIE REVIEW: X-MEN ORIGINS: WOLVERINE

Emmy,
an amalgamation
of her mistakes

Anything seems like a good movie idea at 1 a.m. And despite having full intentions to watch Days of Future Past, we settled on this one.

Notes:

- Why does Logan, a Canadian, fight in the American Civil War? And don't tell me they thought about that because they definitely did not
- Love how the title implies "X-Men Origins" will be a series and they just stopped after one
- It's this and Rio for the best moments of will.i.am.'s career
- Hugh's hair <3 10000/10
- There is one joke and it's that dude's tattoo of a lady getting bigger because he gained weight (GOOD ONE)
- Every moment of this movie is a bad time for someone else to walk into the room
